Code of Conduct for Fundraising

The Labor Party observes a fundraising code of conduct. This code is fundamental to the integrity of the Party and its organisational and Parliamentary members.

- Parliamentarians can, and should, voice the Party's needs for funds or services and on occasions sign appeal letters or participate in other fundraising activities.
- On reasonable request, Parliamentarians can, and should, speak or appear at WA Labor fundraising events.
- Members of the Parliament or candidates should not accept money or services on the Party's or their own behalf, above the amount of $3000 from any one source.
- Donations that are accepted must be held in appropriate Labor Party central banking accounts and must be accepted through the party's financial management systems.
- Online donations may only be accepted through WA Labor's websites.
- Any funds held in accounts, or otherwise not under the WA Labor central banking system with the relevant Tax File Number, will be regarded by the Australian Labor Party and any other interested party as "personal accounts".
- Cheques should be made payable to the Australian Labor Party named account, not individuals.
- It is the legitimate responsibility of the relevant Fundraising Director, Finance Committee members and/or collectors to accept money on behalf of the Party.
- On the written authority of the Western Australian or National Secretary, Parliamentarians or Candidates may act as fundraising agents for the Labor Party.
- Members of parliamentary executives may not be asked to act as fundraising agents or collectors.
- The detail of donations shall be publicly disclosed as per the requirements of the Commonwealth Electoral Act 1918 and the Western Australian Electoral Act 1907.
- The Labor Party does not accept funds that are subject to conditions of any kind.
- Under no circumstances will the Labor Party accept funds which, even if only by inference, are intended to obtain the Party's support for specific actions, attitudes or public statements.
- Donors have a right to put views to the Party but a right to no more than that.
- The Labor Party never raises funds on behalf of any other Party or Organisation.
- Under no circumstances will the Labor Party or any of its endorsed candidates accept donations from the tobacco industry.
- Candidates for public office who act outside these guidelines will be liable to sanctions by the relevant Labor Party Caucus or State or Territory Administrative Committee or other interested parties.
